Ceralsio

Those who know and love the hard-wearing beauty of porcelain should be excited about the new collection from Ceralsio Porcelain Surfaces, which is available in 26 colours and a choice of finishes. For those less familiar with the benefits of the material, it is stain- and scratch-resistant, strong and simple to care for, and is suitable for worktops, vanity tops, tiling, flooring and wall cladding. Prices start from £350 per sq m.

Second Nature

No matter what the size of your kitchen, we all know that good storage is an absolute must. With this in mind, Second Nature has launched its YouBoXx storage solution, which is available to suit base and larder units and offers a range of storage options to personalise cabinet interiors, including knife blocks, bottle holders, individual boxes and rails. Second Nature's YouBoXx base unit is priced from £340.

British Standard

Under British Standard's direction, this Edwardian kitchen has undergone a Scandinavian-inspired transformation, with distressed furniture, exposed ducting and concrete floors. The walls are clad in whitewashed horizontal clapboard-style planks and Shaker-style British Standard cupboards with tongue-and-groove detailing. Cupboards start at £465 and an average-sized British Standard kitchen costs in the region of £8000.

Murmur

The secret to that coveted come-to-bed look is casual layering. Take a lesson from Murmur, which has brought together its Dew throw, £130, its Mosaic bedding range, including duvet cover, from £70, and pillowcases, from £17. Accent cushions add the finishing touch: Etch is priced at £45 and Matsu is £40. All available at Houseology.

Lelievre

Since 2012, Lelievre and Jean-Paul Gaultier have proved to be quite the design double act. Their latest collaboration is a wallpaper collection comprising 15 designs in 42 colourways. Fans can rest easy because the signature themes of the Gaultier universe are ticked: think bold flowers, sailor stripes, the spirit of Paris and tattoos. Our favourite paper, Horimono (right), is available in six colours – shown is Argent – and priced £100 per 10m roll.

Cielo Ceramica

The exposed framework of the I Catini vanity lends an industrial look to this pared-back design by Cielo Ceramica, available with a ceramic, marble or steel basin in three styles – circular, oval or rectangular. Take customisation to the next level with the ceramic basin, available in a choice of 16 colours including the Polvere finish seen here. Extra storage can be specified with marble or ceramic shelves. Priced from £1560 at CP Hart.

Crosswater

Crosswater brings a traditional aesthetic bang up to date with Belgravia Digital, a single- or dual-outlet digital shower valve with a colour-changing LED temperature indicator that allows you to precisely control the flow and temperature of your water. An optional wall-mounted remote control is also available, which can be positioned up to 10m away from the digital processor and allows users to turn the water on, divert between outlets, or fill the bath, all before entering the room. The price of the dual outlet is £774.
